(no registration required)

Title

Climate Change and Human Health

Description

The overall purpose of this 90-minute webinar is to orient participants to the human health issues likely to result from climate change and update participants on federal initiatives in climate change and human health, including the upcoming National Climate Assessment (NCA). The webinar will include leaders within the state and local public health agencies on climate change adaptation, who will spotlight some of their efforts. Speakers will identify potential opportunities for the PEPH community to get involved in the NCA process and to partner with state and local health agencies. At the end of the webinar, attendees should have a better understanding of the purpose and scope of the NCA, the role they can serve in helping inform the NCA process and some preliminary steps by which they can contribute.

Please feel free to distribute this invitation to all your interested staff.

To join the meeting, click the link below a few minute prior to 1:00ET on October 7th, 2010.
